

Additional Keypads

If we had to guess where your keypad is right now, it would be at the front door or your garage, right? While this may be convenient, it's not the safest place to have it.

Most burglars break into your home through the front door or through the garage—each place being where you've likely set your keypad. This makes it hard to access the keypad in case of an emergency.

That's why we suggest adding a second keypad near your master bedroom. That way, you can quickly access the keypad to set it to distress mode to get a quicker response time from the authorities.
